Synopsis

Synopsis

A short history of the Tea Estate, Cinchona Plantation, and Darjeeling Himalayan Railway (DHR). It was established by British Government (East India Company) in India at hilly region named Darjeeling hills.

After its establishment and till late 1980s-90s period the condition of the Tea Garden, Cinchona plantation and DHR was very good. Day by Day the condition of the establishment is deteriorating and the condition of establishment and the primary stakeholders related to these establishments are suffering with bad economic condition.

Tea Gardens are been converted into resorts, the primitive inhabitants i.e. the laborers and it's progeny of this establishments are going to unemployment condition and are forced to go to other states and gulf countries in search of better livelihood opportunity for self and of family.

The inhabitants of this establishment do carry educational degree but are forced to do the similar labour work in overseas as they are the immigrants and are treated as laborers.

The DHR is also losing it's foreign tourist attraction than before in 1990 we used to witness foreign tourists in mass but now a days we find very few couples that too is limited in the heart of the town, Batasia loop and Railway stations of Darjeeling.

The political condition of the region is going pathetic day by day, the democratic representative i.e. the Elected Member of Parliament is powerless and the Nominated Member of Parliament is been given power to work on his own vicious interest and his love for chair and greed for money is open to all public. Members of Legislative Assembly and Councilors are also having the same vicious interest to pile up assets for his generations to come.

Neopatrimonialism and non-interference of state or union government is also one
